GRAND PRIX SHOW JUMPING HISTORY

The sport of Show Jumping was derived from fox hunting; grand prix show jumping began in Paris, France in 1866. Show jumping enabled owners to exhibit their horses' abilities in a more confined arena, as opposed to the fox hunting fields. As show jumping usually takes place in a small arena or stadium, and is almost always timed, the horse in question must show flexibility, maneuverability and extreme jumping proficiency. Show jumping was officially recognized as an Olympic sport in 1912.
